TV TELETYPE*: NEW YORK: NEIL HICKEY REPORTS:

On March 10, ABC plans to show the "Grand Awards of Sports" presentation from the New York Theater at the World's Fair. It'll be a kind of Oscar-cast for athletes . . . It appears that NBC intends to wield a heavy ax on its nighttime schedule. Among the probable discards: Kentucky Jones, The Rogues, Hazel, The Famous Adventures of Mr. Magoo, Karen, and TW3 . . . DEAN MARTIN is definitely scheduled for a weekly musicale, and among top contenders for other regular spots on NBC are I Spy, an adventure drama starring ROBERT CULP and BILL COSBY; and Convoy, which has JOHN GAVIN eluding subs in the North Atlantic.

ABC will field a new daytime game show in April. It's called Rebus, and contestants will attempt to identify famous people from sketch clues . . . It's likely that MARY MARTIN's Easter special will be shelved by NBC unless some financing is forthcoming. The tab is reportedly close to a million dollars.

as we see it

■ If you're planning to catch up with Profiles in Courage this summer, forget it. NBC does not intend to repeat any episodes of the program which, despite praise from critics and many viewers, goes off the network schedule—permanently—after May 9.

These hour-long dramatizations of the late President Kennedy's Pulitzer Prize-winning book present a shining side of the American character, moving examples of men and women who have sacrificed their own well-being for the cause of independent thought and action. The writing, acting and production have been generally good, often outstanding.

■ But the programs cost more than $100,000 apiece and they've been only half-sponsored. Ratings have been below the 17 or 18 mark usually deemed necessary to keep a show on the air, possibly because the second half of Profiles is on opposite CBS's Lassie, a very popular dog. NBC has therefore decided to find something else for its Sunday-at-6:30 P.M. (ET) spot. This is unfortunate for the roughly 12 million viewers who enjoy the program, but is perfectly understandable. NBC is a business. And it has, at least, made an effort.

Profiles in Courage will be placed in syndication—sold to individual stations—instead of being rerun this summer. Perhaps there was no network sponsor willing to pay for Profiles during the summer. Perhaps more stations will buy the program if it isn't rerun on the network.

■ Thus what many believe to be the best new program series of an unusually dull season goes off the network air—a victim of the peculiar American commercial system that carefully excludes any but the most frivolous of programs (with mighty few exceptions) from winning a regular position on nighttime schedules.

New Continuous-Action tablet has 8 times more cold-relief medication than the leading cold capsule

Actual Quantitative Measurement of Relief-Giving Ingredients

The chart on the left shows the big difference between amazing new Anahist Continuous-Action Cold Tablets and today's leading cold capsule. An actual quantitative measurement of relief medications, the chart shows new Anahist gives you—not just 2 or 3—but 8 times more! Why?

Though both formulas contain antihistamine and decongestant, new Anahist adds analgesics, a stimulant, an antitussive . . . all medications missing from the capsule. So Anahist relieves nasal-sinus congestion—plus headache, fever, coughs and muscular pains as the capsule cannot do.

Gives you more medication in the first 12 minutes than the capsule does in 12 hours.

New Anahist is as fast as it is strong. Instead of working pellet by pellet, the entire outer layer dissolves in minutes—a “sunburst” of medication for fast relief. And thanks to the powerful inner nucleus, relief continues all day or all night.

So don't settle again for pellet by pellet relief. Get 8 times more cold-relief medication with new Anahist Continuous-Action Cold Tablets.

How Morticia Addams successfully used Vampire Traditional for that warm, ghoulish effect

When Morticia Addams (of ABC's The Addams Family) embarked upon decorating her home, she boldly set the mood with a burst of dramatic and unexpected furniture arrangements, a palette of pungent colors calculated to put to rout pastel prettiness, a trunkful of inherited goodies, a precious cache of objets d'art, all topped off with an inspired blending of the traditional and the bizarre, to metamorphose potentially inert space into a veritable triumph of eclecticism.

"Think big!" she told herself, knowing full well that one bold decorating stroke can bring a room to life. Thus, in the spacious living room, she utilized one oversized piece—the soaring stuffed bear—to add an exclamation point of excitement, and then underscored it with a brilliant use of color—the traditional brown of the bear happily contrasted with the blood-red of the wallpaper and rugs, the better to enable us to hear this clear, sharp clap of color. Emphatically bracketing the dramatic bear are, of course, the hastate head of swordfish and, above the fireplace and its copper caldron, the moosehead with its whimsically drooping antler. The turtle in the center of the room is lagniappe—as daring a contrast to the rococo of the harpsichord as the bear itself!

Easy elegance in the living room. Noose is for summoning the butler.

filled with popcorn waits invitingly beside the staunch, steer-horn-girded armchair. The chair sits in convenient coordination with the stock market ticker and its charmingly utilitarian wire basket, while nearby is the bell-pull for the butler, fashioned delightfully in the form of a noose.

The rest of the living room is a mélange of sparkling nosegays—striking, open-mouthed snake candlesticks on the mantle, armored figure holding aloft a galaxy of lights, and eye-catching draperies dramatically framing the Victorian anteroom. Only “Thing” in its golden, nail-studded box on the table by the telephone is deceivingly practical: A daring blend of traditional styling with modern-as-tomorrow convenience, it is a hand which reaches up and lifts the phone from its cradle when it rings and performs other courtesies.

Leaving the easy elegance of the living room for the gaiety and whimsy of the playroom is not as giant a step as one might suppose, for the latter contains the same echoes of other places, other times. Brick walls and wine kegs, blushing with misty color, provide a strong accent which evokes the very scent and patina of the past. But this room is, above all, designed to be used—the sturdy bed-of-nails chaise longue, the charming but practical iron maiden, the stocks gaily inscribed “HERS,” and, for the kiddies, a rocking unicorn. The chair made of antlers complements the steer-horn chair previously noted in the living room, but it has an appropriately casual air matched by the suit of armor beside it with its whimsical dead man inside. Clearly at work in this room are the benevolent familiars responsible for imbuing inanimate stone and wood and iron with a delicious, intangible charm.

Indeed, Morticia has produced something wonderful!—Leslie Raddatz

Only one celebrity in 20 is sharp enough

to cut himself a piece of Goodson-Todman panel pie

---

At one end of the long conference room at Goodson-Todman Productions is a table on a small, improvised stage. Five people are sitting around it: opera-star Vivian Della Chiesa, comedian Danny Crystal, actress Judy Henske, singer Bob Carroll and actress Amanda Howard.

All belong to that curious category of human beings known as the celebrity; or, as Mark Goodson puts it, the people with "tags." ("Nine-tenths of celebrity is the tag you put on somebody. He's the star of this, he's appeared in that. People don't actually recognize the person, they recognize the tag.") The celebrities are diligently playing a series of Goodson-Tod-man games under the supervision of a pleasant-faced man named Bob Bach, associate producer of What's My Line?

On the other side of the room is a huge conference table around which a watchful crowd is packed. The crowd consists of Mark Goodson, Bill Todman and about 20 executive producers, producers, associate producers, assistant producers and various aides of the shows of the Goodson-Todman stable: What's My Line?, Password, To Tell the Truth, The Match Game and The Price Is Right.

ing. . . . The password is "sideburns." Danny Crystal wriggles like an eel, snaps his fingers. Someone guesses "Elvis." Bob Carroll helpfully adds "Abe Lincoln" and is reprimanded for using two words. Nobody gets it anyway. . . . The guest's "line" is "pickles." "Does the product beautify the home?" asks Vivian Della Chiesa. Everybody chuckles. "Is it a weird product?" asks Danny Crystal, wriggling as energetically over "pickles" as he did over "sideburns." Everyone chuckles again—but not very hard.

The truth is, it's all very familiar-sounding, but the zing is missing. Most of the panelists—in this critic's eye—are not very entertaining. The only genuinely lively one is Amanda Howard. Danny Crystal persists in emitting irrelevant gags, despite Bob Bach's subtle discouragement of the practice. Vivian Della Chiesa is as sober as a bank teller. Judy Henske seems like a troubled housewife trying to decide between two brands of soap. And Bob Carroll, amazingly, projects very little.

The audition is work, not play

It is not a lively affair, and the mob packed around the conference table is not peppering it up any. This is actually work for them, not play. These are the weekly auditions for the hundreds of celebrity shots of the year on the Goodson-Todman shows—and behind their superficially affable faces, each one in the crowd of producers is seriously evaluating the players as possible candidates for his own show.

The standards are simple enough: Goodson-Todman panelists are expected 1) to have lively, attractive personalities; 2) to be able to ad-lib entertainingly; and 3) to be able to play at least one of the Goodson-Todman games well.

You'd think it would be a fairly simple matter to pick up in the course of a year hundreds of celebrities who satisfy these simple requirements. But you'd be wrong. "If we get one good person out of 20 auditioned, we're doing very well," the Goodson-Todman gentlemen uniformly report.

Actually, they say, an "attractive" personality is a surprisingly rare commodity. "We're looking for sparkling people, people with lively, expressive faces, people who are amusing," says Mark Goodson. "But when you call in a lot of people, you get a high percentage of loxes. Loxes? You don't know the expression? Well, it doesn't only mean smoked salmon—it means deadheads!"

As a matter of fact the celebrity market is so flooded with "loxes" that the hard-boiled sophisticates who run the Goodson-Todman enterprises become lyrical, not to say gushing, when they discover a non-"lox." "It's such a thrill, it's so wonderful when you find someone really good," says Bob Bach. "For instance Barbara Feldon, a girl who appears in commercials. She had a perky, kooky quality—bright, quick, cute. It makes you feel just great to find people like that!" Similarly Edythe Chan, associate producer of The Price Is Right, raved about Kaye Ballard. "Oh, she was such fun. She was kidding around, making faces, enjoying herself so much. She was wonderful."

Good ad-libber a rare bird

If a celebrity with a lively personality is a rare bird, the celebrity who can ad-lib is a still-rarer bird. "On our shows, people have to cope with an extemporaneous situation," says Frank Wayne, producer of Password. "Many of these people are absolutely lost without a prepared script." Reports Bill Todman, "Some of the biggest stars go to pieces on camera when Continued on page 14

they're forced to be themselves." By some hideous paradox, however, the one type of performer who is expert at ad-libbing—the comedian—presents a bigger stumbling block yet. The Goodson-Todman people describe the problem tactfully. "The comedians tend to think we're interested in them as comedians. They put on performances," says Frank Wayne. According to Bill Todman, "Comedians are tempted to forge ahead and leave colleagues trailing behind, which works against the success of the show." If you peel off the tact, what this complaint amounts to is that most comics are compulsive gag men who betray their teammates without a pang in order to provoke a giggle. The cooperative exceptions to the rule—e.g., Milt Kamen and Orson Bean—are few and far between.

Good game-players scarce

Finally, there is a shortage of celebrities who can actually play games well. Some do exist. "Some very big stars are hooked on Password," reports Mark Goodson. "Danny Thomas, Lucille Ball, James Stewart, Peter Lawford, Sammy Davis, Tony Perkins—they're like alcoholics on Password. They play it all the time. These are excellent game players."

But this fortuitous combination of fame and ability to play games is infrequent. "You can be very intelligent yet not good at games," says Goodson. "The most astonishing people can't play them."

And the castoffs from Goodson-Todman auditions are astonishing indeed. Among the distinguished flops are Dr. Brian O'Doherty, an art critic, opera singer Blanche Thebom, and interviewer Long John Nebel.

How do the flops feel about being flops? Some laugh it off. Some get angry and tell off the Goodson-Todman establishment in colorful language. The agents of the celebrities who flop feel even worse than their clients. "The agents call us right away after the auditions," says Bob Bach. "Right away it's 'How did my boy do?,' like mothers calling to find out how their kid did in algebra! You say, 'OK.' What else is there to say. Failing?'"

Why does success or failure at the Goodson-Todman auditions mean so much to people? "Because everyone wants to be on a panel show," says Wayne. "It's the easiest buck there is."

There's only one exception to the high standards and it is made for what Mark Goodson calls the "enormous" star. Good, bad or indifferent as a personality or as a game-player, the "enormous" star has merely to indicate his desire to play "Password" or to guess somebody's "Line" in order to be on the air. "If someone is a big enough celebrity," says Mark Goodson, "you'll forgive almost any game-playing deficiency. If Liz Taylor or Richard Burton want to come on—how badly can they wreck the show in one night?"

The answer is: They can't. Anything a Liz Taylor or a Richard Burton or a similar "big" celebrity will do will interest the public.

No tolerance for lesser 'loxes'

But there's no tolerance for lesser "loxes." And the celebrity with the "tag" who is not a household name must go through the trial by fire if he wants a slice of the panel pie.

So that's how it is over at Goodson-Todman, every week. And remember it when you watch your next panel show. For every charming, witty, articulate game-player you see on the air, there are a few dozen dull and/or tongue-tied celebrities who are sobbing disappointedly into their pillows.

In the Jan. 23 article "Once Upon a Time" I inadvertently omitted one member of our company from my remarks accompanying the pictures. Our "Cinderella" score was arranged and conducted by one of the foremost musical talents of today—John Green, winner of four Oscars. Although he will not be seen on the colorcast Feb. 22, I should like to thank him, through TV GUIDE, for his invaluable contribution to this production.

PLATO VS. GLEASON

In her Feb. 6 article "Jackie Gleason, Thinker" Edith Efron quotes Jackie as saying, "Plato was one of the stupidest men in the world." That is not a reflection on Plato. It is a direct insight into the mind of Mr. Gleason.

Dr. A. Ward Applegate
Noblesville, Ind.

Jackie Gleason's irresponsible comments on Plato et al., are the scratchings of a superficial one. Gleason is more comfortable in a bartender's apron than in academic robes.

SO THERE!

To the female star of Broadside: in the Jan. 9 article "Kathy Nolan of Broadside" you are quoted as saying, "Broadside involves serious actors and actresses doing comedy. McHale is a bunch of stand-up comics. We're doing a job. They're a bunch of goof-ups." If you were quoted correctly, and inasmuch as we all have been subjects of TV GUIDE pieces, we have no reason to believe that you were not, may we say the following: Mr. Joe Flynn studied speech and drama at the University of Notre Dame and has a degree in the same field from the University of Southern California. Mr. Tim Conway has the same degree from Bowling Green State University. Mr. Ernest Borgnine has an Oscar signifying him to be the most outstanding dramatic actor of the year. Be that as it may, no matter what our academic or professional qualifications might be, we feel that inasmuch as we blazed a path in a field in which you are a pale copy, we are not deserving of your gratuitous insult.

McHale's Navy
Universal City, Cal.

WAKE UP, TV

Three cheers for Marya Mannes' Feb. 6 article "If I Had a Network." I do hope the "powers that be" take note. Let's wake up, TV.

Marjorie W. White

Marya Mannes sounds like a very earnest girl in a very earnest progressive school. You know, some of your readers are grown-ups.

FOR THE RECORD

Northern California Edition

Ups and Downs: As this television season moves past its midway point, the Top 10 shows, according to Nielsen's most recent pronouncement (based on viewing during the two weeks ending Jan. 24), are, in this order: Bob Hope's Christmas Show, Bonanza, "The Wizard of Oz" (special), Bewitched, The Andy Griffith, Ed Sullivan, Dick Van Dyke and Red Skelton Shows, The Fugitive and Gomer Pyle, USMC. Meanwhile, down at the other end of Nielsen's little list, we find the Bottom 10 prime-time network series are, in order of unpopularity: Bell Telephone Hour, On Broadway Tonight, That Was the Week That Was, Joey Bishop, Mickey (already canceled), Wagon Train, The Outer Limits (also canceled), Kraft Suspense Theatre, Karen and The Baileys of Balboa.

Sic Transit . . . : Nielsen's numbers become significant to the nth degree this time of year. The networks have turned their attention to next season, which means that this is a time of reckoning for every show with less than stratospheric ratings—and a time when the atmosphere is thick with rumors naming the shows which won't be with us next fall. At this stage of the guessing game, the 10 bottom fish listed above include those most likely to get the hook. But there are others reported to be in danger, including a number of long-running series: CBS's Perry Mason, The Defenders, Rawhide and The Doctors and the Nurses; NBC's Mr. Novak, International Showtime, Alfred Hitchcock and Jack Benny; and ABC's Burke's Law and Jimmy Dean. As for this season's new entries, the scuttlebutt lists these as most likely to recede: ABC's Wendy and Me, Bing Crosby, ABC Scope, Jonny Quest and Valentine's Day; NBC's Kentucky Jones, Mr. Magoo and The Rogues; and CBS's Slattery's People, The Entertainers, Cara Williams, Many Happy Returns, My Living Doll and For the People. It's a bit too early to count all of these shows out, but most of them will be among the missing come September.

Sawing the Sawbones: NBC is contemplating some drastic surgery for Dr. Kildare. If present plans materialize, the show will be sawed in half—next season. Instead of running once a week for an hour, Kildare may be telecast twice weekly, in half-hour doses. The most likely office hours: 8:30 to 9 P.M. (ET) Mondays and Tuesdays. NBC would thus become the second network to try the twice-a-week formula. ABC started things this season with Peyton Place and is so pleased with the rating results that a second twice-a-week series, The Girl from Peyton Place, is being readied for next season. Unlike Peyton Place, however, Dr. Kildare will not become a serial; if it switches to the half-hour format, each episode will still be a separate entity. —Henry Harding

All the world's a stage

And many actors must find their most lucrative roles far from the Hollywood studios

BY JOHN MAYNARD

Shoppers for a certain make of automobile in Santa Monica about a year ago frequently were struck by the resemblance of the agency's chief floor salesman to "that actor—uh, what's his name, the one that always played the comedy gangster? You've seen him a hundred times!"

Well, they were right. The salesman was the comedy gangster, his name was and continues to be Allen Jenkins, and so rooted is his professional identity that he was known for a decade as the "fifth Warner Brother." To filmgoers of that era, it seemed

James Cagney or George Raft could not drive crosstown without Jenkins riding sawed-off shotgun at his side. By his own reckoning he had appeared in some 230 pictures in his 33-year Hollywood span, plus more than a hundred television shows.

Is it not fantastic, then, that such a man should be selling cars? On the contrary, it is commonplace. Show business today, with special emphasis on television, frequently gives actors a clear if chilly choice: Moonlight or go hungry.

actors," a spokesman for the Screen Actors Guild declared recently, "are continually involved in the struggle for livelihood and must get it from the outside. This has always been so. It's a matter of simple arithmetic."

The "arithmetic" is indeed surprising, especially in a glamorous occupation in which everybody is supposed to drive at least one Cadillac. There are 15,000 SAG members (not including extras), of whom 65 percent make less than $5000 a year—and that's a euphemism. They average about $1800. Only 1650—or one in 10—topped $10,000 in 1963.

Man can't live by acting alone

From this it becomes painfully evident that not many actors can live by acting alone. The man who served you up that hamburger at Ted's Grill near Malibu a couple of years ago didn't just look like an original Dead-End Kid; he was an original—Billy Halop, sometime short-order cook, picking up some small change between acting jobs.

The moonlighters are many, up and down the scale—from the just plain hungry to the unmistakably wealthy. Leon Lontoc, chauffeur on Burke's Law, is a barber and maitre d'hotel. Michael Wilding, a former husband of Elizabeth Taylor, is a theatrical agent when not acting. Benson Fong and Philip Ahn, two of the best-known Oriental actors, own restaurants. So does Lola Albright. Vincent Price buys paintings for Sears. Theodore Bikel has an interest in a record company (for which he also records). Jim Garner is an officer in the Silver Lake National Bank in Los Angeles. Fred Astaire has his dance schools.

Jackie Coogan hawked hoods for kitchen ranges before McKeever and the Colonel and later The Addams Family got him off the hook. That one-time idol of the kids, "Captain Midnight" (Richard Webb), manages the office of an independent TV production company. Then there is the fanciest moonlighter of them all, George Murphy, the movies' longtime song-and-dance man who, when things got slow, ran for the U.S. Senate.

Moonlighting, however, is open to all manner of ways, shapes and interpretations. Few Hollywoodians doubt, for example, that Leon Ames and Ben Alexander are car dealers before they are actors—but only fiscally speaking, since no actor worth the name would throw away his SAG card even if elected President, and presumably even then would use the White House phone to call his agent. Alexander continues to be available as a player, while Ames supports, in Mister Ed, Alan Young, who in turn supports a horse.

Ames and Alexander illustrate the principle whereby the moonlighting tail ultimately wags the acting dog. Gloria Pall, whose beauty is sort of in the Jayne Mansfield-Mamie Van Doren mold, is another whimsical case in point. Miss Pall set TV ablaze back in the mid-50's (see TV GUME Feb. 5, 1955) as a siren dubbed "Voluptua" whose function was that of mistress of ceremonies for late-show movies; then proceeded to put the fire out with periodic appearances on the Danny Thomas, Bob Hope, Donald O'Connor and Eddie Cantor shows.

When things really bogged down Miss Pall turned determinedly to real estate. Today she drives a lavender Mercedes and hopes soon to own an entire development in the hills above Sunset Strip, where her thriving business is situated. Yet—"I've got it made," she said recently. "I've got—well, the Mercedes, my own home, money I never dreamed of, insomnia, anxiety neuroses, and something I think may be an ulcer. I mean, what more can a girl ask?"

Then there is bearded Hal Gerard,

D.D.S., SAG, villainous veteran of some 200 movies and TV shows, who, when ends ceased to meet three years ago, slipped back into dentistry, after having dropped it for acting in 1931. Dr. Gerard today grosses about, he says, $100,000 a year ("I might make five thousand acting if I gave it my full time") and enjoys the luxury of saying no to television offers.

Once or twice a year, however, he still succumbs to the ham in him and says yes. (He was last seen on The Danny Thomas and The Bill Dana Shows last spring.) The $750 he gets for his acting spots hardly covers what it costs him to lock up his office.

Perhaps the most delicate nuance of moonlighting shows itself when still-big-name stars take part in commercials. The name of the game is M-O-N-E-Y. Edie Adams speaks well of a cigar (Edie Adams? Cigar?), Julie London of a cigaret, and Joseph Cotten of a pain reliever. Rose Marie is hooked on one of the trading stamps, while Edward G. Robinson, by reputation a gourmet, has discovered the joys of instant coffee. As have Barbara Stanwyck, Claudette Colbert, Ursula Theiss and Robert Taylor, Lauren Bacall and Jason Robards.

The case of Allen Jenkins

Purists may scoff at the idea, but, slice it how you like, it's still moonlighting. That is the opinion of auto salesman Allen Jenkins. He does not despise TV moonlighting or its practitioners. He respects both. He should. In fact, he must.

To understand how Jenkins dipped from a high of $4000 a week to a low of $89.50 as a tool-and-die maker at Douglas Aircraft, it is necessary to understand both Jenkins himself and the nature of the business that brought him to his greatest affluence. Now 64, he came to Hollywood in 1932, a year when, for a chosen few, the livin' was easy and the taxes low. He was acutely receptive to both conditions. He was also a compulsive spender, a lover of luxury, travel, an easy touch and a spectacularly poor judge of the stock market.

In the last year of his seven-year Warner contract, he was making $1750 a week and miserable because it wasn't three times that. He managed to escape his plush bondage, and for a while seemed to have made the right decision. In the three years after his release, he made seven consecutive films at $2500 weekly and had to turn down $5000 for an eighth—he was contractually bound to appear opposite Ethel Merman in "Something for the Boys" on Broadway.

To Mexico by taxi

He did this for a long run, still at four figures, then began tobogganing downward. There were respites but not enough of them. The culmination was the job at Douglas.

A film job came along, however, and he leaped nimbly back up the salary scale to $1750 again—for nine weeks. This left him with a billfold so chockful of goodies that he celebrated by taking off for Ensenada, Mexico—in a taxicab. There he spent 10 days picking up the tabs for six friends he ran into, including his taxi driver, whom he now believes he overtyped. This escapade left him with exactly $6.42 and brought him to the car agency for the first time in 1952, again fighting for subsistence.

He is still fighting for subsistence. He is not the first. Francis X. Bushman, over whom millions of women swooned in the early silents, today runs a modest gift shop on the corner of Crescent Heights and Santa Monica Boulevard in West Hollywood.

Jenkins speaks for all when he says: "I go where the work is and do what the work is! Moonlighting's a fact. The rest is for the birds."

They peeled off the makeup—
TO FIND AN ACTRESS
Burlap and bare feet
brought Geraldine Brooks' talent into focus

Press agents' biographies of their actress clients usually contain some such paragraph as the following:

[She] is a fascinating chameleon. In a drawing room or at a dinner party she is chic and elegant. At cocktail gatherings she is flirtatious and flamboyant. Out-of-doors, enthusiastically gardening or deep-sea fishing or exploring out-of-the-way places, there is always a lot of tomboy in her. But with a touch of lipstick, a bit of jewelry, a flower in her hair, she can change before your eyes into a sexy hoyden.

This is an actual passage from the official biography of Geraldine Brooks, who has appeared in most of the top television programs, including Dr. Kildare, Mr. Novak, Ben Casey, Kraft Suspense Theatre and The Defenders (where she played the first woman in whom E. G. Marshall has ever shown a romantic interest). What makes this passage from her biography different from other similar flights of prose is that it is attributed to Budd Schulberg, author of "What Makes Sammy Run?", "On the Waterfront" and "The Disenchanted," and, since last July, husband of Geraldine Brooks.

The Schulbergs live in the old house at the top of a hill above Hollywood which she has rented for many years; but, she says, "We may go off fishing in Mexico or to New York to see some plays or to London for a wedding." They met originally when Budd was her baby sitter. She was 9 years old at the time, he was 20 and a student at Dartmouth College. Sometimes when he came to New York on weekends he was pressed into service as baby sitter by her family, the Stroocks, owners of the famed Brooks Costume Company, from which Geraldine took her stage name. The Stroocks were old friends of the Schulbergs, who were among the first families of Hollywood. After seeing each other only occasionally in between, Geraldine and Budd finally got together again 30 years later at a family dinner in New York.

That is where Geraldine was born, on Oct. 29, 1925. Although she has an older sister, she says that she was a "loner" as a child: "We lived in separate worlds." Thus, like many actors and actresses, she created her own private world. "I talked to inanimate objects," she says. "That's continued

why it was easy for me when I went to the Actors Studio. When they told me to be a tree and to imagine the sap running through me, I could do it because that is what I had been doing all my life. Even now Buddy laughs at me when I'm talking to the cat—he'll say, 'You were that cat.'

The cat in question is a stray the Schulbergs have adopted and named "L. C."—for Lost Cat. It has created something of a problem in the household, since both Geraldine and Budd are enthusiastic bird watchers and the cat is typically fond of birds. "Buddy is training the cat to leave the birds alone," says Geraldine. "Every little while he says, 'L. C., don't eat birds.'" Meanwhile, according to Hollywood gossip columnist Mike Connolly, "Geraldine Brooks' dishabille at bird-feeding time in her back yard is steaming up the binoculars of her Laurel Canyon neighbors."

Any partiality Geraldine may have for dishabille began in Italy when she made the picture "Volcano," with Anna Magnani. She went barefoot and wore a burlap dress in the movie and even less away from the cameras. Before going to Italy in 1950 she was, according to an observer at the time, "like any of 50 other Hollywood starlets." Photographs of her then show the familiar lacquered-on starlet's face and the vacant starlet's smile. In "Volcano," however, she was permitted to wear no makeup. A reviewer commented that she "emerged with astonishing beauty and an unsuspected range of facial expression."

She had gone to Hollywood two years before with a contract at Warner Brothers and heralded by a full-page picture in Life headlined, "The man who costumes Broadway sends his daughter to Hollywood." By 1949, after several movies, she was what the trade referred to as "lost in the recession shuffle at Warners," and making a Lassie picture at MGM. Thus after "Volcano" she was in no hurry to get back to Hollywood. She stayed on in Italy for a year. The time since she has spent between stage and screen, between Broadway and Hollywood.

Now, apparently firmly settled and happily married (after a divorce from TV writer Herb Sargent), she is content with her occasional television and motion-picture roles. TV has typed her in dramatic parts—"I'm apparently very good at hysteria," she says—but she would like to do comedy. She hopes that the light role she plays in "Cry of Laughing Owls," with Robert Taylor, establishes a trend. But if it doesn't, she won't mind. "I used to worry about goals," she says, "and I was miserable all the time." Now she is happy, traveling with her husband, taking care of a stray cat, feeding birds and steaming up the neighbors' binoculars.

ADDING CURRY TO THE CURRICULUM

Burgess Meredith, as the new principal, is expected to bring tang and snap to the activities at Jefferson High

BY DWIGHT WHITNEY

Someone has churlishly observed that the good things that happen in TV are often happenstantial—entering through the back door, so to speak, before the watchdogs of commerce know what hit 'em. If this be so, then the arrival of Burgess (Buzz) Meredith, the eminent Broadway actor-director, to replace the ailing Dean Jagger as Mr. Novak's new high school principal, is already a classic case. There are more fascinating ifs involved in the sudden transformation of this already successful show than anything since politicians discovered political conventions.

If Mr. Jagger, an actor truly beloved by viewers and co-workers alike, had fully realized, as someone close to him has said, "what a grueling amount of work an hour series entailed"; if he had not become fretful about the new direction the show seemed to be taking; if he had not developed a serious ulcer condition and delayed the operation that might have cured the situation; and if his physician on Friday, Dec. 4, had not delivered a stop-work ultimatum, none of this ever would have happened. Sainly Albert Vane, principal of Jefferson High School, still would be at the same old stand.

If, on the other hand, Mr. Meredith's Broadway play "I Was Dancing" had not folded only weeks before; if he had not been in Hollywood for the express purpose (he says) "of filling the coffers" while waiting for his other projects to mature; if he had taken the Wagon Train he was offered ("at considerably more money") instead of the two-part Mr. Novak story called "Faculty Follies," none of this would have happened either. For before that busy Friday continued when Jagger's doctor placed the call to Alan Courtney, a top TV executive at MGM, no one had the slightest notion that Meredith would move in on the principal's office, much less that the onetime boy soprano, star of "Winterset" and protégé of playwright Maxwell Anderson would want to.

He played an antihero

Indeed, while any TV company would give its eyeteeth for a performer of Meredith's caliber, the character that Meredith played in the "Faculty Follies"—the Martin Woodridge who would subsequently become the new principal—was startling. Woodridge is an academic and social misfit of the sort that is supposed to curdle an agency man's blood. His trouble is that he hates people. In a single morning's shooting on "Faculty Follies" (this after the changeover had been announced) director Joe Sargent shot scenes in which Woodridge (1) maliciously piles on extra assignments to improve the class's "attitude"; (2) chews out an earnest young man who says he is glad to be in the class; and (3) haughtily rejects an apology from Novak for calling him on his (Woodridge's) impossible behavior of the night before. In "Follies" he is, to quote producer Leonard Freeman, "not only a rigid traditionalist but an estranged human being." Hardly the sort of thing designed to make Novak addicts out of the mothers of America and their rock-'n'-rolling sons and daughters.

Yet the arrival of Mr. Woodridge in the person of Meredith may just be the greatest thing that ever happened to Novak. Heroes with salt, especially salty father-images, are a rarity in the medium. The character of Albert Vane ran more to the sweet. Consequently the problems in a Novak script generally arose from outside sources, and Vane's solutions were perforce too steeped in the milk of human kindness to always make for sharp drama. Already the show had shown the telltale signs. Scripts had been aired dealing with suicide and parricide, to name a couple of the obvious concessions to the need for more "excitement" in the series. Now the situation has changed; the conflict may outweigh the corn for once. If not, there will at least be a sharper schism between wise-old-mentor and headstrong-young-teacher (Novak). This despite the fact that the Woodridge character will be thoroughly dry-cleaned before February is out.

An outgrowth of happy desperation

Actually, the dry-cleaning began in "Faculty Follies," which was seen on Feb. 2 and 9. The script was originally written for another actor, Donald Pleasence (who was unavailable) and was already being shot with Meredith in the Pleasence role—when the doctor's call came through. The idea of picking up Meredith permanently grew out of happy desperation—Meredith's presence made it too obvious to miss. Freeman discussed this wild notion with Courtney and E. Jack Neuman, executive producer and co-creator of Novak. Both were pessimistic about how Meredith might receive the idea, but that same afternoon Freeman cornered Meredith on the set anyway.

"He had a sinister look," recalls Meredith. "I thought he had come to fire me."

Meredith mulled the matter over the weekend and accepted. Why not? His play had closed. The new William Inge play he was set to direct was not ready. There were no movies on the horizon to follow his latest, "In Harm's Way," shot last summer in Honolulu. His repertory-theater project in partnership with his good friend Zero

Mostel was temporarily in abeyance. Zero had gone and got himself into a hit, "Fiddler on the Roof," which was due to run "forever." Besides, the men of MGM were waving real money and such attractive side inducements as a piece of the action, limited hours and a car to pick him up at the Beverly Wilshire every morning.

"There were a couple of factors," Meredith explained a few weeks ago. "I've always carried the main burden. This way Jimmy [Franciscus] would take it. And it's a little easier to jump aboard an established hit."

Freeman and Meyer Dolinsky, a schoolteacher-turned-writer, immediately went to work on changes. The Woodridge character, once a misogynist with a mother problem, suddenly acquired a home life and an understanding wife in the person of actress Anna Lee. The focus changed from a rather deep psychological estrangement to a temporary hang-up over his career, setting the stage for his transformation to what Freeman calls "the delightful pixy with the Yankee shrewdness" with which he hopes to transfix audiences.

"But," insists Freeman, "he will remain a very opinionated man, not always popular and not always right."

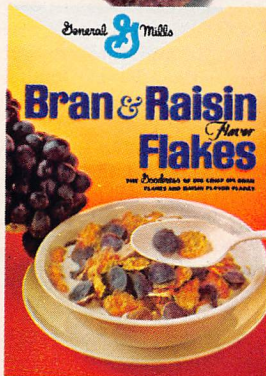

Franciscus is not so sure. "We're going to have to forget about 'Faculty Follies' after we've made it," he said last December.

Then Freeman delivered his master stroke. It happened he had previously shot a script called "The Crowd Pleaser," which had once been scheduled at election time. In this story, Vane runs for state superintendent of schools and loses. Freeman had withdrawn it on the grounds that viewers were surfeited with politics.

It was lucky he did. Now he put the show, retitled "Mountains to Climb," in for retakes. Instead of losing, Vane wins, and in a dramatic last-act scene (performed by telephone since Jagger is continued not around to act in it) it is Vane who appoints the greatly misunderstood Martin Woodridge Jefferson High's new principal.

"It is our little plus," explains Freeman. "Now we can bring Dean back from time to time in his new role of state superintendent."

He then doctored the schedule. He placed the last remaining Jagger show (in which Meredith does not appear) right after the two-part "Follies," following that with "Mountains to Climb" on Feb. 23. Neat? "You're not just whistling Dixie," as one veteran Novaker enthusiastically puts it.

During all this, Jagger had been successfully operated on for an ulcer, leaving behind him all his troubles at Mr. Novak. And they were more than most people realized. In the first place, the grind had proved too much for a man of his age and condition; the grind and the ailment aggravated each other. In the second, he was uneasy with the tendency toward melodrama which the scripts had begun to display. Periodically he was unhappy with the writing.

Jagger's problems

"I think it got to the point where he really thought he was Albert Vane," an insider has said privately. "He did a lot of impromptu rewriting which brought him into conflict with the management. Poor Dean. There was always somebody down there trying to smooth things out."

Meredith, of course, knew nothing of Jagger's troubles. He only knew that he had embarked—and happily. Not that this is the first TV Meredith has ever done. He has done a great deal of it, mostly guest shots, perhaps half a dozen a year, at times when not acting in long-term Broadway projects like "Teahouse of the August Moon." He has directed—shows like

"The Jet-Propelled Couch," a Playhouse 90 which drew attention in the late 1950's. And he has turned down dozens of television series—The Travels of Jaimie McPheeters was the last one.

Now, as he explains it, he has Palm Springs to compensate for the temporary separation from his 50-acre farm in Rockland County, N.Y., his fourth wife, Kaja, and their two children, Tala, 12, and Jonathan, 13. (Jonathan is the same young man who, when told his father was a distinguished actor, looked him right in the eye and said, "Yeah, Dad, but what are you going to do when you grow up?")

"Let's face it, I live high," he says. "I raise jumping horses, Kaja flies airplanes. The younger people don't know who I am. And that, in this day and age, is essential."

No faultless man

"Maxwell Anderson used to say the faultless man is dull—and hard to play. His quirks make him into a man. But that's MGM's problem. I'm wise enough not to come in here with any startling ideas. I can tell you this though; I won't make Woodridge bland, no matter what they do. I'm playing him pretty rough now. The only change I've really made is to unactorize the man to bring him closer to what I am, since I have to play him every week."

How about the sponsors, Scott Paper, Pontiac, Fritos, etc.? "Well," said Meredith. "Fritos. That's a type of corn, isn't it?"

"Funny," he mused. "You come in to get an ice-cream soda. First thing you know you're serving the customers and owning a part of the store."

But they were ready to shoot.

"Pardon me," said Buzz Meredith, the distinguished Broadway actor-director and series TV star, "while I knock this immortal thing together."

The show--which CBS is thinking about expanding into a series--features CONNIE FRANCIS as hostess and young singing stars like BOBBY RYDELL, JAN AND DEAN, the SUPREMES and the FOUR SEASONS doing their noisiest at such remote locations as ski lodges and beaches. What with Shindig, Hullabaloo and the projected Surf Beat, this is rapidly becoming one of television's most crowded bandwagons.

Reporting on a Government-Financed Study of Five Leading Pain Relievers, an article in The Journal of The American Medical Association shows that Bayer Aspirin is as gentle to the stomach as any product tested, including the higher priced buffered product.
